

BIANCO CARRARA MARBLE

Bianco Carrara marble is quarried in the Carrara region of Tuscany, Italy. It is named after the town of Carrara, which is known for producing some of the world's finest marble.

Bianco Carrara is one of the most well known and popular types of Italian marble, and it has been used in buildings and sculptures for centuries.

The marble has a white or off grey background with varying shades of grey white veining throughout the stone. The veining patterns can range from subtle to bold, and they can be linear, diagonal, or swirling in appearance.

The color and pattern of the marble can vary depending on the location within the quarry where it was extracted.

Bianco Carrara marble is highly prized for its beauty and durability. It has been used in Rome and Michelangelo's David sculpture.

It is also a popular choice for flooring, countertops, and other interior and exterior design elements.

However, it is important to note that because Bianco Carrara is a natural stone, the colour, veining, and pattern can vary from one slab to another. This is part of the charm and beauty of natural stone, but it can also make it more difficult to achieve a uniform look in larger installations.
